

ABSTRACT

A seat with adjustable head rest, suitable for a car, comprises a head rest portion, a supporting portion positioned within the head rest portion and at least two connecting portions. A securing element is used to secure the supporting portion with the connections portions. A plurality of positioning holes allow adjustment of a distance between two supporting bars to fit seats of various specifications.